They were just shy of celebrating 56 years in marriage. Dave continued to teach electronics starting at South County Technical High School. He then worked at Union Electric, now Ameren, as a safety trainer for several years. He went to Washington University where he completed his Bachelors of Technology in Computer Sciences in 1984. When he retired he continued to work part time at Schaffer Hobby shop in Sunset Hills teaching and assisting customers with RC airplanes and boats. He traveled with Dee all over the United States, visiting national parks, children and other friends. Throughout his life he was constantly building radio control cars, airplane, trains, boats and robots. He was the president of the Admirals Boat Club and member of the MENSA Society. He really enjoyed his family, dogs, ice cream and movies.
