“ I will miss seeing John on Fridays! We got together at Joe Westers place every Friday, drank a beer or two, talked, laughed, just had fun. He will be missed, and he was a wonderful person! This ole world need more men like John! Condolences to hid family!

Sincerly,

Albert Newbold

“ John Bagsby, Jr., acquired the nickname Sockeye at four years of age, He was riding on a horse with his brother-in-law, Jim Cissell, when Jim spotted a fellow he wanted to fight. Jim got off of the horse and had Junior sit on a porch while Jim confronted the fellow he had a difference with. When Jim and the other fellow fought, Junior cheered Jim by urging him to "Sock him in the eye". Sockeye was the name of a cartoon character that Cissells applied to Junior after that incidence.

When Junior was a teenager and in his early twenties, he was known as the "cool uncle" by his nephews, of which he had many.
