“ Hey Adam it's Kris. You know that friend you said you wanted to fight for some reason the first time you met me. We ended up being great friends I used to come over and we would play modern warfare 2 all night. I miss the days were we would just hangout and play video games. I miss the days when we would just go out and do some of the stupidest things that we should of gotten into trouble for. I've been married for a few years now I have custody of my 4 of my little brothers the ones I told you about and a daughter that's 10 months old now named Amaya. I live down the street from you're parents house I drive by with a tear in my eye every time buddy I miss you and hope you're having a good time up there. My family would of loved to meet you I've told them all story's about you and how great of a guy you were.

Keep a seat on the couch warm for me we have some gaming to do next time we meet

“ Its been a while and i'm sorry we didn't get to talk sooner, but the times we had and classes we ended up in together in high school were really fun man. You are going to be missed by a lot of people buddy. Rest in peace forever, we love you.

*Best,
Josh*

“ As leaders, we aren't supposed to pick favorites, but sometimes you just find yourself looking forward to seeing certain Soldiers. Adam was such a Soldier. It isn't so much his sense of humor that I remember most, but how he delivered a punch-line. Dry, flat tone, suso subtle, that you could easily mis it, but if you caught it, it was usually hilarious. I know he hid a lot of pain under those jokes. There is a strength, I think, in helping others to smile, when you want to cry. Adam was a good man. I'm sorry he's gone, but I'm glad to feel this sorrow. It means I was lucky enough to know him, and appreciate the time we had. I hope he's found peace.
