Its been a long 5 years grandpa. I miss you every single day but I keep that feeling of depression for missing you in the back of my head for most days so I can continue the effort of living a normal life with the help of your wonderful and loving sister Jeannie K Motley and Wayne (Donald Motley). I love them both all so much and without them right now, I dont think I would have accomplished as much as I have already. I gained so much knowledge from them and found my drive. Thanks to Aunt Jeannie I was able to graduate from Mehlville high school year of 2015. I really miss you but living with Aunt Jeannie and seeing her everyday gives me a sense grief knowing that she is your sister and a part of you and it helps keep me going. I love her to death and never been so close to anyone before like I am today with her. Its kills me inside knowing that everyday her back is killing her and that she is in pain because she finally got what she worked her whole life for and that was to retire and she cant even enjoy that like she planned. I pray for her to get better to keep bringing me and the rest of the family more joyful years to have with her. I hate the fact that every time I get close to someone they get taken away..:(making me feel once again alone. Without her I would be devastated. So please Lord let me keep her for a while longer and help her health get better please. ("Life can only be understood backwards; but it must be lived forwards." ~Soren Kierkegaard) I really liked this quote because Aunt Jeannie knows and helped me understand what lifes all about but Im still learning as time goes on but she has a great understanding of it and is like my instructions manual to life. I would give up half my life just to spend more time with her because without her, It would be like a pair of lungs without any oxygen. I love and miss you and one day will see you again but untill then Im going to spend much time with her before the good lord says its time to go. Love you grandpa.

Sincerely,

Kyler Scott Adams
