“ Dennis Currie...we will miss you!

I've never shared this story with anyone. The first day I met Chris's parents was in 2016. I was nervous as any girl would be. It was a very hot day, Dennis, Lois and Chris were outside doing yard work. Chris met me at my car, where we exchanged a big hug and we walked down the hill to meet his parents. Chris assured me his parents would love me. We met, everything was great and then something happened. Chris and I were walking up the side of the house, where he found that his dog passed away. As you can imagine, emotions were high and as Chris searched for a place to bury his dog, Lois stopped what she was doing and Dennis turned off his Gator and we all stood there. We attempted to help Chris but he wanted to do it himself, so we stood there anyway . How awkward, right? Wrong, at that moment, I knew that this was my new family. I never felt as much love and respect from anyone than I did that day. We could have easily walked inside and sat down but we choose to stay with Chris until he was ready. Later his mom put a vase of flowers on top of his dog's grave and that made my heart so happy. As the years went by, Lois continued to put flowers on his grave. From then on, they were stuck with me. They took me in, when they didn't have to. I'll be forever grateful for that time!! Dennis stepped in to be a man that always showed up. I love you and miss you already! I'm glad to have had 4.5 years with you❤️

“ About 6:30 one morning, we found that a large tree had fallen across the driveway preventing me from getting to work. Mike's chainsaw fell apart trying to clear it, so he headed next door with the pieces. By the time Mike arrived, Dennis already had his garage door open and was ready to receive neighbors in need. Dennis had a multitude of chainsaws, so Mike left his chainsaw behind (so he wouldn't have to carry two) and came home with the loaner.

A little while later, Dennis stopped by and asked if there was anything we needed from town. Of course, he was making the trip simply to get a part for our chainsaw. A couple of hours later, Dennis came by with the repaired chainsaw freshly oiled and blade sharpened. Mike asked how much he owed Dennis for the repair, and Dennis whipped out the receipt and announced $6.82. Mike acknowledged the price of the part and asked again how much we owed. $6.82.

This is our friend Dennis, a great guy who would give you the shirt off his back or the chainsaw from his garage. Thanks for everything, buddy. You will be missed.

“ You are one of my favorite people on the planet. I'm so glad you and Dave became friends on the loading docks of Venture back in 1973. You and Lois have blessed my life with love and friendship. Every major event in our lives you've been a part of. I love you brother and miss you terribly. I have a Dennis size hole in my heart. Love, Connie Hopkins
