“ My Dad was an extraordinary man. He was the most honest and dedicated person I've ever known. Wise and gave me advice, only when I asked for it-- that I will never forget. He was so sweet and was well liked by everyone. Talented, funny, true, dependable, trustworthy, caring. He adored Arianna. Wanted to sit on the porch with her and watch hummingbirds and tell her stories about the horses. She always had a million questions, as little kids do and he answered each one of them with a smile. I brought her back there with me this last trip home, at his request. He had a chance to see us both before he left us, the following day.

I miss my Dad already. I had to be strong and talk about anything but his health issues. Never cried, watched him while he slept and wept on my own. Didn't want to scare him. He always thought of others before himself and I wanted to honor him like he would have me.

He's gone now but his character, silly humor and manner will live on forever in my heart. I've learned a lot from him to use in my own life.
