Helen loved the simple things like gardening and watering her flowers, she would talk to her plants and just her love alone would take a once withering and dying plant back to a place where it would blossom and become strong again. She would watch her beautiful little hummingbirds fly in and out while drinking from of a feeder that still hangs in her Japanese Maple tree to this day. She would watch birds bathing themselves in her bird baths with a big smile on her face enjoying watching what she called Gods little creatures doing what they do. She would always cherish the time spent when her family would get together, either for family game nights, or outdoor movie nights, and especially on the holidays where she looked forward to just having everyone be together in close proximity so she could watch everyone laugh and love one another so she could share with everyone of what she loved, and what truly meant the most to her which was her beautiful relationship with God and his son Jesus Christ.

“ Helen lived with us when I was little. She was the same age as my sister Linda Sue. I can remember her holding me and singing. As I got older 9 or 10 it was hard to understand the she was the little sister to my dad. That’s why I always call her aunt and sister because she is and will always be my big sister
