From a young age, he learned the value of responsibility while helping his father with logging during his school years, a work ethic that stayed with him throughout his life. He opened his heart and home to many foster children, offering them stability, guidance, and care when they needed it most. James found joy in the outdoors, spending his time hunting and fishing, and he carried a lifelong passion for speed and mechanics through his race car. James and his wife Nannie enjoyed the outdoors, traveling and searching the flea markets and antiques stores for bargains. Above all, he cherished his family, and his legacy lives on in the lives he shaped, the love he gave, and the memories he leaves behind.
