“ My first extended conversation with Jim was about love. He saw me looking at my husband, Dave. He came over and said he could see how much I loved Dave and was he the love of my life. I said yes and he told me Diana was the love of his life also. It was like we had formed an incredible bond. After that whenever he caught my eye he would either point to Dave and I both or he and Diana. It was a special thing that I never talked about until Thursday when I heard the horrific news of his passing. Because of that conversation a long time ago we knew why he did that. I started doing the same after a while. We'd both smile or laugh when we caught each others eye. I have a lot of respect for him and Diana. He was a very special man with a wonderful heart. He loved almost everyone and most everyone loved him. He passed doing something he truly loved...perhaps not his chosen way to go but, none the less he has left his love behind. He will always be with her watching over her, I know. I pray that his memory will hold her over until they meet again. Much love, Diana.
