“ Thurs., June 7, 2007

Allie was my second youngest sister--one of my "little" sisters. Although I was unable to attend her memorial in body, I was still there in spirit. Allie was always a proud and independent person--somewhat of a "free spirit" who, among other things, loved riding her motorcycle when she was younger with the wind blowing in her hair and not a care in the world. Allie loved to laugh, and it was seldom she was seen without a smile on her face. Allie also loved to sing. (She's probably singing with the angels right now!) I can only admire the way Allie fought her battle with cancer so courageously. (I wonder if I would be as courageous under the same circumstances.) Even though Allie lost her battle with cancer, she fought a good fight! Although Allie and I have lived miles apart most of our adult lives, I'm still going to miss my "little" sister. I grieve Allie's loss along with her husband Glen, her son Skeeter, and everyone else who knew and loved Allie. My heart breaks that Allie's gone because I'm really going to miss her, but I have faith that someday we'll meet again.

“ How well I remember Gwen and her marvelous ability on the piano. She was a great resource for the music department in the middle 1960"s. Many HHS soloists were helped by Gwen"s accompanying skills. She can still be heard playing on the HHS Dance Band"s recording. LAJ
