Upon seeing Les some 20 or perhaps as much as 25 years between our previous contact, seeing Lester again was as though no time had passed at all. His personality in his fifties, was exactly as it was in his twenties, which is largely as it was in the 4th grade; just a fun-loving, wonderful, universally DECENT human being! While Les' appearance was outwardly fearsome, his hulky exterior belied his genuinely good heart. Reading through over thirty comments following an announcement, I was struck by the fact that virtually every single one cited the words "nice guy," were included in those descriptions. Nowhere was there an ambiguity in any reflection. If one's universal legacy is that he is "a nice guy," it is indicative of a life well-lived. An so it is with Les. A life well-lived by a good, decent, and wonderful man with an endless smile, whom is adored by all, and already sorely missed! I am heartbroken at his loss.

Go well brother. Godspeed. We'll see you on the other side old friend.

“ Little Les

*What a great cousin to be around. Glad I got to go on rides with him He always took it slow and smooth giving instructions on how to be alert. We as family will miss you sooo very much. You impacted our lives as Hulk Hogan look alike all my brothers took up weight lifting to look big as you (never happened) ha ha. Les you were our leader and will never ever be forgotten. Love to everyone

“ In such a sad time for all, it's with a smile that I see all the hearts Les touched in his time.

When I first met Les, he was one of the toughest looking guys I had ever seen. While that never changed, it was amazing to also experience what a kind soul he had.

I'll always be thankful for the memories I had with him. Rest easy, buddy.
