She knew no strangers; she was everyone's friend and people were drawn to her outgoing personality. She was not a quiet person; she was a force to be reckoned with. She meant the world to her family and friends and took great care of them. Margaret was a genuinely kind person and loved her family immensely. Margaret enjoyed unwinding with a few sips of vodka or one of Walter's infamous Bloody Mary's. She was a devoted wife, wonderful mother, dedicated grandmother and great-grandmother and trusted friend to many. She will be fondly remembered and dearly missed by all who knew and loved her.
