Ray was so outgoing, and made friends wherever he went. He was always cheerful, even when going through very difficult times. I remember the times when he needed help with shopping and I took him to the places he always shopped, he would introduce me to everyone, and just by my being with Ray, people would be so friendly and be so nice to me, because I was with him, and he was so well liked. (Especially at Radeackars). He had so many good friends that were like family to him, and long ago when he didn't have a phone, when he would come to our house to visit, he'd get out his wallet with the phone numbers of all his friends on little cards and scraps of paper, and keep in touch with everyone. If I live to 100 I won't have a fraction of the friends that he did.
