“ We choose to tell everyone about our friend Tom the golfer. Every Saturday morning Tom joined a group of four of us to play a round of golf. We made small bets, kidded each other, talked about every subject on earth, laughed, teased each other and chucked our way around the course. Here is what we saw. First, Tom hit more good shots than bad and he won as much as he lost. He would compete hard to win, but win or lose he was the same guy. That’s not easy. He was always ready for the next hole or the next week. Golf is a sport that reveals character. If you want to get insight into a person’s personality take them out for a few rounds of golf. Go out every week for more than ten years and you will really get to know who a person is deep in their soul. Here is what ten plus years of golfing together revealed about Tom the human being. The golf really did not matter. Our conversations on the course showed what was important to him. He loved most to talk about his family. He was so rightfully proud of each and every one of you. He loved Becky and his kids and frankly never stopped talking about his grandchildren. He loved being a grandpa. He was a good friend to each of us that cared more about getting out together than the score. Ten years of golf revealed that Tom Hood was a good and honest man. That is about the best thing anyone can say about a person. Saturday morning golf, for most of us including Tom, was also a chance to get away from the pressures of life for 4 or 5 hours each week. He loved being there and we loved having him as our friend and golf buddy. Tom clearly knew how lucky he was to have a family and friends that loved and respected him. Last Saturday morning was a bit sad at first... but we knew Tom was watching from above and would want us to get on with it and keep it going. We did our best, as best we could without our buddy.

God bless Tom Hood,

“ I am so deeply saddened to hear of this news, I absolutely can not express how taken back I am to hear of Tom's passing. I was honored to have met Tom and Becky and to provide care to Mr. Hood. Such a delightful man who could always make the nurses smile even when he wasn't feeling good, he could always hold a good sports convo and the light in his eyes when he bragged about his grandchildren could be seen from across the room! Even with all he was going through he took time out and sent a gift (a cardinals bear of course) just a week before his passing to my newly born baby! I will truly miss both Tom and Becky in the infusion center! May God rest his soul.

“ Unfortunately we met Tom and Becky after cancer, that awful disease that we always curse brought us the blessing of a beautiful friendship. I am so thankful that we got to know Tom, even though it wasn't long enough. There are some people that feel more like family than friends from the beginning, that is the way I will always remember Tom. God bless! Elise and Jamie Aromando and family
