My heart aches for you.

Remember LOVE follows us, no matter how far.

Sorrow is a fleeting emotion, but love is infinite.

Memories are the legacy of love.

Magic happens when two hearts become connected at birth. Memories can never be erased.

“ It is with great sadness that we gather today to pay our respects to Joe-Son, Brother, Father, Grandson, Nephew, Cousin, Friend to us all.

My name is Matt Hohmann and Joe was my first-cousin. He was 13 years younger than me and I have known him his whole life. Joe made his living as a carpenter and while he was talented at figuring the angles, I always thought that Joe would have been a great salesman, for the same reason- he always had an angle that he was working.

Joe's true passion in life was his family and his friends. As a friend- Joe could be trusted to always "have your back". He was loyal, generous, and kind. He liked to discuss things and bounce ideas around. It was enjoyable to see him mature from a Hot-Head into a man that took other opinions into consideration. He respected me and I him. The last text I received from him said "hey, I need to bounce something off you- value your opinion." We never got to have that conversation, and I regret that.

Speaking of regrets, Joe certainly had his. He was trying to make up for past transgressions and wanted to do right for himself and his children. On occasion, Joe would lose sight of what truly was important. Being surrounded by family and friends that loved him- he would get an ear full from all sides. NOT because he wanted to hear it- BUT because he needed to hear it! Despite these setbacks, he never gave up. Joe had the best of intentions and wore his heart on his sleeve. As his mother, Janet- so endearingly said "He may have been a pain in the ass, but he was "my" pain in the ass." One thing for sure is that he was an original- one of a kind JOE- to know him was to love him.

While Joe's life was too short- 31 years----it was a life worth living. Joe lived his life with such intensity and passion that he was able to cram 100 years of living into 31 years. He worked hard and played harder. He shared his life with us and for this I am grateful. I will truly miss his tall tales, jokes, and other antics- we had some good times and these are memories that I will cherish.

So in closing-----

From the Joey who always wanted to please everyone, to the rebellious teen, to the young man finding himself and making a way for his self in this world-

Joe, You will be remembered in our hearts. You were loved, and we were honored to be a part of your life.

Your Cousin/Your Friend
