“ I thought about you today as I scrolled through Facebook. Wondering how you were, wishing your pain would ease then I realized it had. I'm happy you are free but sad that you gone. I will always be grateful that Facebook brought you back into my life, even for a very short time. Rest high on that mountain young man. Your time here is through. I'll keep our friendship close to my heart till that day when it can be renewed. Not by a Facebook post but by God's promise of an eternal life.

“ I woke up this morning and my first thought was to call and see how you are and how bad your pain is today...my heart breaks that i will never hear you call me 'darlin' again, but it is relieved to know the answer to my question is 'there isn't pain any longer' Rest in peace my dearest brother.

“ I awoke this morning and my first thought was to call you and see how you were, how bad your pain was and to tell you I love you. When the fog lifted I felt the bullet hit my heart again, felt my world shatter to pieces, again. I just want to hear you call me 'Darlin' one more time. But there is comfort in knowing if you could answer my question you would tell me there is no more pain, only peace. I will see you on the other side. I will be the one running into your arms. This world is a little less color without you. God I miss you. Sleep easy sweet brother.
